

EIAA Child Find Program

Are you concerned about one of your younger children? Does he or she seem to have difficulty hearing, seeing, or learning? Perhaps it is time for a Child Find Evaluation.

Who can refer a child to Child Find?

Parents, educators, doctors, or other community members may refer a child to Child Find for assessment. However, the parent or guardian must give permission for any assessment.

Which children are eligible for services?

When a child aged 2.9 to 5 years old is referred to Child Find, the child will be assessed by various professionals, depending on the area of concern. When the assessments are completed, the staff will meet with the parent to determine eligibility. If a child is found eligible, the parent must first consent to have special education services provided. An Individualized Education Plan (IEP) is then developed and Child Find helps to determine the appropriate location for services.

What about children older than 5 or a 5-year-old who is in kindergarten?

If the child is enrolled in EIAA, please contact the teacher about your concerns. If the child is enrolled in a different school, contact that school. If the child is being homeschooled, contact the Child Find office for your school district.

How do I contact Child Find?

Please contact the school district office in your county and ask for the Child Find office.
